Russian Baltic Fleet Clings to French Harbor, in Spite of Protests, and England Gets Ready to Back Japan with Her Naval Power.

The crews are working night and day to get all the ships ready for immediate departure from the port, and work is being pushed with such expedition that no shore leave has been granted even for Easter.

On the other hand, Fred Tenney said that his team intended to take advantage of the weakness of the aggregation here in the City of Churches, and win to-day's game, as well as those scheduled for Sunday and Monday, for Manager Hannon has made the plans to play a game to-morrow and as he puts it, "Without any interference of the police."

GREAT BRITAIN JOINS JAPAN; URGENT PROTEST TO FRANCE

LONDON, April 22.—The Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette says he understands the British Ambassador to Paris has been interrupted in his Easter holiday and has returned to Paris to present a note from his Government supporting the protest made by Japan against the stay of the Baltic fleet in Kamranh Bay.

TOKIO, April 22.—The Ministry of Marine announces that trustworthy eye-witnesses report seeing four Russian cruisers outside Kamranh Bay, and seven battleships inside the harbor.

Six other warships were noticed in single formation outside the southern entrance to the bay.

Public feeling over the situation is intense.

PARIS, April 22.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says the Czar has ordered Admiral Rojestvensky's Squadron to leave French waters.

CZAR'S FLEET IS SHORT OF STORES

SAIGON, April 22.—The Baltic fleet has not left Kamranh Bay to-day. It is believed that there are fifty vessels in the fleet.

The Russians are short of stores. French and German steamers are carrying immense supplies intended for the fleet.

NAT PATTERSON WILL NEED COURAGE WHEN RAILROADS LITTE SAYS "GIVE MICHELL TWICE AND I CAN DO IT AGAIN," SAYS JOHN L. PRESENT

James Montague Draws Vivid Picture of Trial Describing Counsel on Both Sides, Florida Chorus Girl and Members of Jury That Will Decide Her Fate.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Monday morning will really begin Nat Patterson's fight for her life. The evidence against her is wholly circumstantial. Upon the skill with which this evidence is set forth by Prosecutor Rand and the mastery he obtains over the minds of the twelve men in the jury box depends the fate of the young chorus girl.

The following sketch of Rand and his attitude toward Nat Patterson, and of the tactics pursued upon which he will play with all the skill of a trained student of men, will give the reader of the BOSTON AMERICAN an idea of the tremendous fight the girl will make if she is to escape the grim penalty of the crime with which she has been charged.

By James Montague.
The first Nat Patterson case heard in the little town of New Bedford, Mass., was a former foreman and a street boy with a weak mind to him and to the jury the biggest and most important work in the world.

The young man came in William Rand. The job on which he is heading his abundant energy is an address to be delivered Monday before the jury and to say whether this girl of twenty-two shall live or die.

"Nat" is not yet known that it will be a good piece of work. She has heard two speeches by the same speaker and has been heard by both of them.

Rand, too, knows that it will be an assignment more to do than to do. He is not so sure of his own strength as he is of the strength of the jury. He is not so sure of his own strength as he is of the strength of the jury.

"Grows Blue About the Lip."
In her first trial she has endured these agonizing hours with a steady brow. When Rand, however, she has grown blue about the lip.

John L. Sullivan's mighty right and Charley Mitchell's tricky left.

Former Champion Tells What He Will Do When He Meets His Old Antagonist.

Special to the Boston American.
MARQUETTE, Mich., April 22.—John Lawrence Sullivan, of Boston, former heavyweight champion of the world, who was defeated by James J. Corbett at "Rocky" Corbett, showing that he still "has the punch," has given his views on his coming fight with Charley Mitchell, of England, in an interview with the BOSTON AMERICAN, as follows:

By John L. Sullivan.
My coming fight with Charley Mitchell is a matter of course. I have been waiting for him for a long time. I am not afraid of him. I am not afraid of him. I am not afraid of him.

"PICK SAUSAGES"
One day we were out riding and were passing a field where there were a lot of "catties" growing, when my little girl exclaimed:

"Mamma, some one ought to pick those sausages; they are all running bad."

WHAT MARRYING MEANT
I was listening to a conversation between my little five-year-old daughter, Cecile, and her little cousin the other day.

"Mamma, some one ought to pick those sausages; they are all running bad."

GOD FORGOT TO FINISH
Little Nellie, and four, was very busy one morning with mamma's little school newspaper, cutting out pictures.

"Mamma, some one ought to pick those sausages; they are all running bad."

COMB HER TEETH
My little grandchild Dorothy, three years old, was watching me brush my teeth.

"Mamma, I want to comb my teeth."

GLUE HER TEETH
Marion, and two, was very busy one morning with mamma's little school newspaper, cutting out pictures.

MISS ELIZABETH BROWN.

NOT A PUPPY.
When Dorothy was three she went out one day. I told her not to run away. She answered:

GLAD WHEN HE'S A PAPA.
My little brother Elmer, when three years old, had long curly hair. One day mamma was combing it and it hurt.

STEPPED ON HER NOSE.
My little sister, Elizabeth, three years old, while sitting at my house last Friday night, stepped on her nose.

WINDOWS IN IT.
Handsome trim was served for dinner and little Cecile, when three years old, could not make it, begged for

ON DOWNWARD PATH.
My grandson one day ran into the house and said to me:

COULDN'T TRAP BABY.
Six months ago little boy, three years old, was sitting at my table one morning when he was eating
